

The Fofer Show is a magical, musical, moving storybook, transporting audiences to the special secret island of Fof, home to the multi-colored furry Fofers and their gentle four-legged friends, the Peaceballs.

Multimedia artist Shana Barry tells the tale of the day she discovered the island of Fof during an afternoon adventure in her rowboat. She met the Fofers, explored their special island and now shares their world through musical stories and animations.

Otamo the Fofer is the star of The Fofer Show. The thirteen whimsical story-songs are sung (by Shana) from Otamo's perspective and showcase her adventurous spirit and love for the outdoors and the natural world.

In "The Pink Whale," Otamo and her rowboat encounter a rogue wave. This giant wave came out of nowhere, surely would have capsized my boat, but the whale came rising with her huge mouth open, and I wound up deposited safely on her humongous tongue. Otamo becomes friends with Guinevere, the Pink Whale who saved her life.

In "Cloudland," Otamo climbs a magical tree. On my way through the forest was this tree I know wasn't there before, branches like a ladder as far as I could see, treetop so tall it reached into the clouds, I couldn't help myself I had to stop and climb it. She's invited to a tea party by the Cloud Fofers.

The song "Some are Green," is about Otamo's appreciation of individuality. I'm glad we're not all the same because this world would be quite drab, and who wants a humdrum earth when it can be vibrant and grand. The song also highlights the Fofers' many talents and Foferific activities.

"Around the Island," is a tour of the forest, meadow and shore of Fof. Come on, come on let's take a walk all around this beautiful island. Come with me and I'll show you all the wondrous plants and animals.

The Fofer Show, which includes these songs and more, is an hour-long mesmerizing animated concert featuring Shana Barry's imaginative tales and gentle guitar and ukulele playing. Her soothing voice is accompanied by beautifully illustrated projected animations she's created, which include song lyrics so young readers can follow along.

At the end of The Fofer Show, the audience is invited to meet five real Fofers (actually three-foot tall furry Fofer dolls sewn and sculpted by Shana) plus a pair of Peaceballs and a sea creature named Sullivan Ray. After each of the nearly forty performances so far, people have flocked to the stage to hold and hug the Fofers and their friends, and ask questions about life on Fof.
